

Heat Within

a poem by Jason L. Flynn

Summer wind blows
Round the planet it goes
Its old, Its new
Once upon a time, it knows anew
Summer flies
Summer of 1838 cries
Summer of 1967 jives
Summer of 1994 rhymes
Summers tide blinds and binds
Summers reside inside...
Tears of sadness, tears of joy, round the planet they flow
Liquid air stews
Electricity!!!-A summer storm brews
It washes anew
Then suddenly... Blue
Heat builds through
Air, water, soil, and soul join too!!!
Life alive: movement inside and outside exudes
Conservation or expending, energy bursts in two Night allows movement for the few
Rhythm of crickets in tune
Phloem and Xylem – Plants shine at high noon green, yellow, pink, red, purple, white, and blue Birds, Bees feeling the native spectrum and always in tune
The rhythm of summer simmers starting in June
The search for food of the soul
Finds humans diggin' it too!
